the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million, from 2.5 million in 1980 to 4 million in 1998 (Department of Health 1999). The number of people employed in the health service has increased by 1.2 million, from 1.8 million in 1980 to 3 million in 1998.

There is a growing emphasis on the need to improve the quality of care and services provided by the health service. This has led to a number of initiatives, including the introduction of clinical guidelines, the establishment of clinical audit, and the implementation of patient choice. These initiatives have all contributed to the improvement of the quality of care and services provided by the health service.

One of the key factors in the improvement of the quality of care and services provided by the health service is the involvement of patients in the decision-making process. This has led to the development of patient choice, which allows patients to choose the hospital and the doctor they want to see. This has led to a number of initiatives, including the introduction of patient choice, the establishment of patient choice panels, and the implementation of patient choice schemes.

Another key factor in the improvement of the quality of care and services provided by the health service is the involvement of staff in the decision-making process. This has led to the development of staff choice, which allows staff to choose the hospital and the doctor they want to work for. This has led to a number of initiatives, including the introduction of staff choice, the establishment of staff choice panels, and the implementation of staff choice schemes.

One of the key factors in the improvement of the quality of care and services provided by the health service is the involvement of the community in the decision-making process. This has led to the development of community choice, which allows the community to choose the hospital and the doctor they want to see. This has led to a number of initiatives, including the introduction of community choice, the establishment of community choice panels, and the implementation of community choice schemes.

Another key factor in the improvement of the quality of care and services provided by the health service is the involvement of the private sector in the decision-making process. This has led to the development of private choice, which allows the private sector to choose the hospital and the doctor they want to see. This has led to a number of initiatives, including the introduction of private choice, the establishment of private choice panels, and the implementation of private choice schemes.

"THE DARK KNIGHT," a sequel to Christopher Nolan's "Batman Begins," shattered box office records with its July release. In just 10 days, the superhero thriller brought in more than $300 million at the box office, eclipsing the mark held by "Dead Man's Chest" by nearly a week. Filmed in Chicago, the movie's special effects, musical scores and viral marketing added to its allure and mystique. "The Dark Knight" was nominated for eight Academy Awards, including a posthumous nod for Heath Ledger (for Best Supporting Actor as the Joker). Attempting to enhance its Oscar-winning chances and to surpass $1 billion in worldwide gross, the film was re-released on Jan. 23, 2009.

meant national pride, athletic competition, pageantry and more. More than 10,000 athletes competed in 300-plus events in 28 sports at 31 competitive venues, many of which had been constructed specifically for the Olympics. An estimated 6.8 million tickets were sold for the various competitions, and the Beijing Olympics was officially the most-watched television event of all time. Through 16 days of coverage, 211 million viewers tuned in to the Olympics on NBC. Among the American success stories were Keri Walsh and Misty May-Treanor's consecutive golds in beach volleyball, the gold won by U.S. men's basketball team after a disappointing bronze in Athens and swimmer Michael Phelps' eight golds, which brought his lifetime total to 14 Olympic golds.
